MOOD: 😏 amused

This is where Elmer lives. Although usually not on my substandard stove, but he just got fed and is digesting.

(I think I should have used flash. Oh well.)

Yes, baking with your hands is more fun. And the results have a better texture, and taste better.

Aww, photo of your lad.

Do we get a picture of an Elmer creation at any point? A nice shiny pretzel, perchance?

What a good idea!

Eee, Elmer!

I've been wondering what size of container (ie how much fridge space) a shoggoth needs. Because it's tempting to start growing one, very tempting.

I'm also intrigued by this - no-knead bread. I think it'd probably be less convenient than normal bread rather than more, but it's strange and different. And involves leaving pots of bubbling stuff around in the kitchen, because who doesn't want those? :)

I'm actually finding that it takes less time than other hand-kneaded bread. Because there's a lot of ignoring it. (I have a batch of sponge in the fridge right now which will get to be bread on Monday. That's kind of cool, really.)

Elmer can live two weeks without feeding, we hope.

The bread would be a loss, I suspect.

As you can see, Elmer has a quart stoneware jar of his very own.

Win!
